

Who Puts the Chicken Before the Egg...and Who Doesn't?

THE HUMANE SOCIETY OF THE UNITED STATES THANKS JIMBO'S...NATURALLY! for its socially responsible decision to discontinue the sale of eggs from caged birds in its three San Diego-area stores.

By committing to a cage-free egg policy, Jimbo's...Naturally! is helping free hens from the confines of tiny "battery cages"—wire enclosures that give each bird less space than a single sheet of letter-sized paper. Confined in these cages, millions of egg-laying hens are unable to perform natural behaviors such as flapping their wings, nesting, and even walking freely. Their lives are filled with suffering and frustration.

Unfortunately, Trader Joe's™, which has several San Diego-area locations, continues to support abusive battery cages. Please call Trader Joe's West Coast office at 626-599-3817 and ask the company to follow the lead of Jimbo's...Naturally! by discontinuing the sale of eggs from caged hens.

THANK YOU, Jimbo's...Naturally!, for your compassionate decision to help move
the egg industry away from battery cages.
