

What to Do with Found Baby Wildlife

Have you ever come across wildlife babies and you weren't sure what to do? This illuminating workshop helps participants determine when an animal is really in need of "rescue" and when doing nothing is the correct choice. We will cover age and stage-of-life identifiers, and provide practical information about a variety of species, especially birds. You will leave the workshop more confident about how to assess and help baby wildlife, whether injured, orphaned, or ready to strike out in the world on their own!
