Q1: Nevada native wildlife like coyotes, foxes and bobcats play a vital role in healthy ecosystems by controlling disease transmission, keeping rodent populations in check, increasing biological diversity, and protecting crops. Do you agree or disagree that wildlife like coyotes, foxes and bobcats are important to healthy Nevada ecosystems?

Agree: 86%
Disagree: 5%
Not sure: 9%

Q2: Wildlife killing contests are organized events in which participants compete for prizes—typically cash or guns—for killing the most, the largest, or the smallest animals within a certain time period, usually one or two days. Participants use high-tech calling devices to lure animals into shooting range. In Nevada, wildlife killing contests typically target coyotes, foxes, bobcats and raccoons. Do you support or oppose a ban on wildlife killing contests in Nevada?

Support: 54%
Oppose: 33%
Not sure: 13%

Q3: Wildlife management officials across the country have stated that wildlife killing contests are jeopardizing the reputation of hunters overall, and even the future of hunting itself. Studies show that the American public, while continuing to support hunting generally, is growing less tolerant of practices that they view as inhumane, unsporting, ecologically damaging, or wasteful. As a result, ten U.S. states have now prohibited wildlife killing contests. Do you support or oppose a ban on wildlife killing contests in Nevada?

Support: 67%
Oppose: 22%
Not sure: 11%

Q4: Under the public trust doctrine, it is the Nevada Board of Wildlife Commissioners' duty to hold and manage the public's wildlife in trust for the benefit and enjoyment of all Nevadans. One could say that allowing organized contests to kill wildlife for cash and prizes is a breach of the Commission's duty to protect and conserve the public's wildlife for all citizens, not just those who participate in the contests. Do you support or oppose the Nevada Board of Wildlife Commissioners banning wildlife killing contests in Nevada?

Support: 71%
Oppose: 19%
Not sure: 10%
